HAVE YOU BELIEVE OUR REPORT?

SERIES #47

ISAIAH 53: 1&2

Who hath believed our report? and to whom is the arm of the Lord revealed?

For he shall grow up before him as a root out of dry ground.

He hath no form nor comliness: and when we shall see him, there is no beauty that we should desire him.

JOSHUA 1

NOW after the death of Moses the servant of the LORD it came to pass, that the LORD spake unto Joshua the son of Nun, Moses' minister, saying,

Moses my servant is dead; now therefore arise, go over this Jordan, thou, and all this people, unto the land which I do give to them, even to the children of Israel.

Every place that the sole of your foot shall tread upon, that have I given unto you, as I said unto Moses.

From the wilderness and this Lebanon even unto the great river, the river Euphrates, all the land of the Hittites, and unto the great sea toward the going down of the sun, shall be your coast.

There shall not any man be able to stand before thee all the days of thy life: as I was with Moses, so I will be with thee: I will not fail thee, nor forsake thee.

Be strong and of a good courage: for unto this people shalt thou divide for an inheritance the land, which I sware unto their fathers to give them.

Only be thou strong and very courageous, that thou mayest observe to do according to all the law, which Moses my servant commanded thee: turn not from it to the right hand or to the left, that thou mayest prosper whithersoever that goest

This book of the law shall not depart out of thy mouth; but thou shalt meditate therein day and night, that thou mayest observe to do according to all that is written therein: for then thou shalt make thy way prosperous, and then thou shalt have good success.

Have not I commanded thee? Be strong and of a good courage; be not afraid, neither be thou dismayed: for the LORd thy GOD is with thee whithersoever thou goest.

Then Joshua commanded the officers of the people, saying,

Pass through the host, and command the people, saying, Prepare you victuals; for within three days ye shall pass over this Jordan, to go in to possess the land, which the LORD your GOD giveth you to possess it.

And to the Reubenites, and to the Gadites, and to half the tribe of Manasseh, spake Joshua, saying,

Remember the word which Moses the servant of the LORD commanded you, saying, The LORD your GOD hath given you rest, and hath given you this land.

Your wives, your little ones, your cattle, shall remain in the land which Moses gave you on this side Jordan; but ye shall pass before your brethren rest, as he hath given you, and they also have possessed the land which the LORD your GOD giveth them: then ye shall return unto the land of your possession, and enjoy it, which Moses the LORD's servant gave you on this side Jordan toward the sunrising.

And they answered Joshua, saying, All that thou commandest us we will do, and whithersoever thou sendest us, we will go.

According as we hearkened unto Moses in all things, so will we hearken unto thee: only the LORD thy GOD be with thee, as he was with Moses.

Whosoever he be that doth rebel against thy commandment, and will not hearken unto thy words in all that thou commandest him, he shall be put to death: only be strong and of a good courage.

And Joshua the son of Nun sent out of Shittim two men to spy secretly, saying, Go view the land, even Jericho. And they went, and came into an harlot's house, named Rahab, and lodged there.

"The Doctors Prescription

Seeing OR Beholding

The first verse of the first epistle of John has two different verbs meaning to look with the eyes, but each has its own special meaning: "That which ... we have seen (horao) with our eyes, which we have looked upon (theaomai)" - I John 1:1. The first verb, "horao," means to see with the eyes, to perceive, to know, to experience. The second verb, "theaomai," means to behold, to look upon, to contemplate, to view attentively.

In John 4:35 we read, "I say unto you, lift up your eyes and look (theaomai) on the fields for they are white already." The phrase to look on the fields ("theaomai") does not mean to give them a hurried look, but to look on them thoughtfully so as to understand the significance of Jesus' statement and to see the opportunity here.

Again, in Mattew 11:7 we read: "What went ye out into the wilderness to see ("theaomai"). They were there to see and hear John the Baptist, to try to understand the man and his message. They would be there for hours, paying careful attention, hence the verb "theaomai" is used rather than the other word "horao" meaning simply to see. The Berkeley Version translates this part of the verse, "What did you go out into the desert to gaze on?" This translation gives the accurate meaning of the verb "to see." The Phillips version renders this part of the verse as, "What did you go out into the desert to look at?" that is, to contemplate.

Thus, continuing on through the New Testament, wherever we find the Greek verb, "theaomai" (to see), it carries the thought of looking attentively at something, or of thoughtful regard. "This same Jesus which is taken up from you into heaven shall so come in like manner as ye have seen (theaomai) Him go into heaven," Acts 1:11. They must have stood wonderingly watching Him as long as He was in sight.

This statement gives added emphasis to the words of Jesus, "Take ye heed, watch and pray, for ye know not when the time is," - Mark 13:33. Knowing in what manner He went into heaven is important in watching for His return.

The use of this verb will give added understanding of situations without going into detail to tell it. For instance, Luke 23:55 reads, "The women ... beheld (theaomai) the sepulchre, and how His body was laid." Use of the verb "theaomai" tells us that they looked at the body and the tomb attentively and carefully to be sure that everything was as it should be in every detail.

The old colored man, when asked as to what value his belief in Christ's soon coming was in his life, said, "I'm sitting with my feet untangled."

Come To Church Services

I PETER 4

FORASMUCH then as Christ hath suffered for us in the flesh, arm yourselves likewise with the same mind: for he that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin;

That he no longer should live the rest of his time in the flesh to the lusts of men, but to the will of God.

For the time past of our life may suffice us to have wrought the will of the Gentiles, when we walked in lasciviousness, lusts, excess of wine, revellings, banquetings, and abominable idolatries:

Wherein they think it strange that ye run not with them to the same excess of riot, speaking evil of you:

Who shall give account to him that is ready to judge the quick and the dead.

For for this cause was the gospel preached also to them that are dead, that they might be judged according to men in the flesh, but live according to God in the Spirit.

But the end of all things is at hand: be ye therefore sober, and watch unto prayer.

And above all things have fervent charity among yourselves: for charity shall cover the multitude of sins.

Use hospitality one to another without grudging.

As every man hath received the gift, even so minister the same one to another, as good stewards of the manifold grace of God.

We welcome news of your church and civic events.

New Wording for Sales Contracts: An addendum form to be made part of the Standard Retail Sales Contract will be used for all sales. Enter under Item H of the Sale Contract, only the following statement, "Attachments B and C are hereby made a part of this contract." An Economic Solution To Economic Problems

"The people who commit crimes in New York State are Blacks and Hispanics. Hispanic kids, whether from Latin America, Puerto Rico or Cuba, are the ones who are committing crimes.

"They are the ones who are getting locked up, and as a result, you see the crime rates go down. If there is no father in the home, what role model does a 10-year-old have? A guy in the street selling dope."

Every part of that statement by New York State Department of Corrections Services Commissioner Thomas Coughlin is absolutely true. But the New York State Black and Puerto Rican Legislative Caucus attacked this White man's ideas and one member called them "injurious, prefudicial and racist remarks."

Coughlin also said that the state's inmate population is 51 percent Black and 26 percent Hispanic and 77 percent of the total prison population. He said that this condition is "caused by a lack of jobs, by poverty" and unstable family structures.

With over half of Blacks born to single females, how Coughlin wondered, is a boy going to grow up in a home with a wholesome "male role model."

And like many Whites who want to help, but are intimidated away from the truth, Coughlin apologized. He should now be forced to apologize for apologizing.

If a five-star phoney like Ted Kennedy had blamed Ronald Reagan for the identical situation, lazy-thinking Black leaders would have been standing in line to award him another trophy.

"What I was trying to do was to point out a problem which is so controversial that no one will talk about it," the embattled official admitted.

In case Coughlin doesn't know it, omission is the primary course of action of the Black-leader demagogues. While they lambst Bernhard Goetz for racist motives, they ignore or dismiss the highly questionable behavior of the four Blacks (who "requested" $5) he shot on a New York subway train last December.

Then they raise the threat of White vigilantism overrunning the Black communities of America, but ignore the vigilantism of a Black man, Andrew Frederick, who killed a Black would-be holdup man in the same dangerous New York subway system in February.

A grand jury correctly refused to indict Frederick on murder charges, based on evidence that showed him defending a candy store vendor and being attacked by the assailant.

Fredrick was judged to be acting in self-defense, therefore he was not indicted. Goetz, based on new evidence presented before a second grand jury was indicted Evidence, not race, is the variable in these alleged acts of "vigilantism," an inappropriate term in these cases.

Crime stems from poverty, not race. And a distate for crime stems from decency and a set of values -- not race.

Because Blacks, Hispanics and poor Whites are disproportionately living in poverty, they disproportionately try to change their economic status with non-productive (in the long run) behavior Because so many are raised without supervision and by mothers who are children themselves, values of decency, mutual responsibility and overcoming the system with hard work are non-existent.

But when a White person points out the fact that Blacks over-populate prisons, have few decent role models and are locked away to protect society, the truth is called "injurious, prejudicial and racist."

The name calling does not serve the best interests of society or of those who are injured for life by poverty and its consequences. Why not admit that the core problem of crime is poverty and the economic development of the group that causes most of it is the solution.

An assault on poverty is an assualt on racism, because racism's objective is and has always been to give Whites an economic advantage. Destroy the reality of the advantage and you destroy the premise of white supremacy.

Even the problem of poverty is identified by the lazy thinkers as the core problem of crime, the solution is convoluted. Jobs, thay will say, will eliminate crime, but their solution is that a racist society should provide them.

If the society is racist enough to cause the conditions of systematic and systemic Black poverty, how is it at the same time non-racist enough to stop it?

The same Blacks who are attacking Coughlin for telling the truth are saying nothing about Blacks taking their massive $200 billion (equal to the GNP of the ninth-largest nation in the free world) in consumer power and sharing it with others Blacks.

The cause of crime and unstable families and female-headed households and poor schools and low IQ's and illiteracy and, probably, bad breath, is economic.

We should apply and economic solution to an exonomic problem.

Seat belts save lives. That is a proven fact, yet it isn't enough to convince most of us to buckle up. I won't bore you with all the statistics available to prove it, because it's apparent that even the most convincing information hasn't motivated most of us to pick up the seat belt habit. Only about 10 to 15 percent of us buckle up egularly.

But isn't it all a matter of personal choice? After all, many opponents of the proposed mandatory seat belt law argue, a decision not to use seat belts doesn't hurt anyone else. If it doesn't interfere with someone else or infringe on his or her rights, we're told that the government should stay out of it.

However, your decision not to wear seat belts does infringe on my rights, and those of other taxpayers and motorists. The Washington Traffic Safety Commission conservatively estimates that the non-use of safety restraints cost state taxpayers nearly $4.5 million in 1983. Federal figures put the cost to state taxpayers -- you and me -- at more than three times higher. Besides the expense of emergency vehicles and personnel, there are the costs of supplementing medical care, benefits for survivors, care for the disabled, and court and other legal expenses. This doesn't even address the private costs of property loss, insurance premiums and loss of time at work, or the personal costs of grief, pain and suffering.

Some Bills Dead,Some Bills Still Going Strong

With less than a month to go before the scheduled adjournment of this year's legislative session, many excellent measures have been approved and many ill-conceived measures have been relegated to a quiet death in various committees.

But, unfortunately, thereverse is also true.

More truly necessary pieces of legislation have been lost, and more self-serving and frivolous measures passed, than can be listed here. But a few examples are important to cite

Perhaps the most important issure to fall victim to partisan game-playing is that of child sexual abuse One measure in this category would have established a central registry of people convicted of such crimes, to give businesses and organizations dealing with children a valuable resource for determing if prospective employees have a record of abusing children.

Because this measure, like so many others, was not sponsored by members of the majority party, it was allowed to die in committee.

Yet, while the Legislature's majority failed to deal with this important issure, a aproposal allowing state employees to have money deducted from their paychecks and deposited directly into state employee union political accounts met no obstacle in its passage through the legislature process.

That legislation will allow the powerful state employees' union to enlarge its political coffers, to promote candidates symathetic to higher wages and benefits for its members.

A measure to return excellence to our state's education system and return the control of education to local school districts was killed in committee during the earliest days of the session.

In its place are a broad array of Democrat-backed bills offering state-controlled "band-aid" solutions to this problem, which is so serious and complex that the effects of its neglect will be felt for generations to come.

And, again bowing to special tinterests, majority lawmakers approved a proposal to allow collective bargaining for college and university professors.

The adversarial process of collective bargaining for college and university professors.

The adversarial process of collective bargaining will destroy the longstanding and effective system of "shared governance" between higher-education faculty and administrators.

These are only a few examples of the majority party's catering to special interests, at the expense of the true needs of Washington's citizen.

One cannot help but wonder, in looking at this record, where the priorities of the majority are.

Surely, the people of Washington don't place a higher priority on state employee unions than on sexually abused children, or collective bargaining for professors over quality education for our children.

Yet, these appear to be the values that the Legislature's Democrat majority have chosen in setting policy for the people of Washington.

Court Ruling Boon To Distressed Familes

Without fanfare, and almost without notice, a federal district judge has issued a ruling which might bring significant relief to more needy families than any measure since Ronald Reagan moved into the White House.

On Tuesday, March 26, from the United States District court in Chicago, Senior Judge Herbert L. Will ordered emergency aid for thousands of homeowners currently facing mortage foreclosures or who lost their homes between January, 1980 and July, 1983 through no fault of their own.

The order directed the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) tp re-evaluate the cases of some 32,000 homeowners nationwide who have been denied access to previously agreed upon mortgage assistance programs due to the Department's failure to properly administer the programs.

The litigation began in 1973 when the Legal Assistance Foundation of Chicago sued HUD to force the enactment of a federally mandated program to assist homeowners in default of their mortgages. In 1976, the parties signed a negotiated settlement.

Under the settlement, a homeowner who was sued for default could seek up to three year of relief from HUD for all or part of the payments due. To qualify, the homeowner had to meet certain criteria, which included loss of employment, hospitalization, or loss of relief payments.

The lawsuit was revived in 1979, according to Attorney William Wilen, because the Legal Assistance Foundation found "a significant incidence of error" in the way HUD was administering the Program.

In his recent ruling, Judge Will said that over the years the court had attempted "to cause HUD and its officials to discharge their statutory duty to assist mortgagors." Despite these efforts, he added, HUD officials have promptly ignored, evaded or purported to misunderstanding" the order.

Because I was concerned about the controversy surrounding the negotiated settlement, one of the first bills I proposed upon becoming a member of congress, in 1981, was to stop FHA morgage foreclosures on families that were unemployed through no fault of their own. Although my bill never made it out of committee, it did add pressure and focus more public attention on HUD's dereliction of duty.

Families who fall into the affected category, as outlined in this column, should contact their regional HUD office for information and follow-through. If they do not receive satisfaction, they should contact their U.S. Representative of U.S. Senator.

SOUTH AFRICA STRIKES AGAIN

Twenty-five years to the day after the notorious Sharpeville massacre, South African police once again opened fire on a crowd of black people, killing and wounding dozens. The massacre at Uitenhage cannot be seen as an isolated incident. Rather, it is an integral part of South Africa's racist ideology and violent policies.

It is in the interests of whites and the black majority for change to come peacefully. But the brutality of government policies and its refusal to negotiate South Africa's future with its black majority make peaceful change less likely.

The latest bloodbath is the result of overt government violence, but it should not obscure the daily violent assault on the fundamental rights of the majority of South Africans denied political representation, elementary human rights, and even citizenship in their own land.

Concerned people everywhere inthe world are appalled by the apartheid policy and find it difficult to justify norman relations with a state that has no legitimacy, since it excludes the vast majority of its people from representation.

Even conservative Americans who honestly believe in long-term evolutionary change are fed up, and are insisting that our government take decisive measures to change its friendly policy toward South Africa.

Those conservatives were as shocked as anyone else when they heard President Reagan tell a press conference that both the peaceful demonstrators and the police shared blame for the massacre.

The rest of his statement, about "an element in South Africa that does not want a peaceful settlement, who want trouble in the streets" was remarkable. It is as if the prisoners in a Russian gulag were to be blamed for wanting freedom.

Those remarks, along with his refusal to visit a former Nazi concentration camp on the 40th anniversary of its liveration by Allied troops, betray an insensitivity to human suffering and to American ideals of freedom and liberty.

Top Administration officials have hastened to condemn the latest South African outrage, but unless they change the policy of "constructive engagement" that is seen by South Africa as a continued license for oppression, such statements will ring hollow.

One source of American pressure on the South African government comes from corporations doing business there. In recent months I have talked with many corporate executives who are deeply troubled by South Africa's inhumane policies and by the economic inefficiencies caused by apartheid. Many are coming to the conclusion that their continued presence in South Africa may no longer be worth the trouble.

Others believe they still may be able to do some good by staying. They have integrated their work force, upgraded living standards for their black employees, and now are beginning to speak out openly against apartheid.

They say that pulling out remobes a major pressure point on South Africa -- the threat to withdraw U. S. investments.

In fact, by recognizing and negotiating with black trade unions, and by training and employing skilled black workers, the apartheid system is undermined.

But the big question is time. Time is running out for South Africa. It is also running out for America's opportunity to influence the future and assure a peaceful end to apartheid and minority dictatorship.

NAACP Mourns National Board Chairmans Death

NEW YORK -- Kelly M. Alexander, Sr., chairman of the NAACP National Board of Directors since January, 1984, died at his home in Charlotte, N.C., late Tuesday, April 2. He was 69 years old. The cause of death was not immediately know.

He leaves his wife Margaret Gilreece to whom he was married for 39 years, and sons Kelly Miller, Jr., and Alfred.

Benjamin L. Hooks, NAACP executive director, expressed the Association's sorrow and condolences to his family. "He was a fearless warrior who bowed to no foe," he said. "He died on his feet -- the way he wanted to go."

Mr. Alexander was one of the pioneers of the modern phase of the civil rights movement in the South. He dedicated more than 40 years to the struggle for equality and justice for black Americans. He believed that it was possible to achieve social change within the system. He saw the NAACP as the ideal vehicle through which he could achieve an end to Jim Crow. Through the NAACP he fought to make the principles of the United States Constitution a reality for all Americans, not just for a select few.

City Light Ask Customers To Cut Back On Electricity

The Tacoma Light Division is asking its customers to cut back on their use of electricity.

The lack of rain this winter season has resulted in lake elevations below their desired levels. Consequently, the rate of water withdrawal has been decreased such that the utility is only able to generate minimal amounts of power at each of its hydroelectric projects.

To meet customers power demands, the Light Division is spending about $70,000 a day above budgeted expectations to purchase power it can't generate itself because of the low runoff.

"We're asking our customers to voluntarily conserve electricity," said Don Caha, power manager. "That's so we can cut back on power purchases until the rainfall returns to norman or the snow in the mountains begins to melt."

"We not asking for curtailment, just to reduce electrical consumption wherever possible," Caha Said.

Caha noted that there is not a shortage of power throughout the region; in fact, there is a regional excess.

"The shortfall is in Tacoma's own resources, forcing the Light Division to purchase additional power at significant additional expense, as compared to the cost of producing the same amount of power from the city's hydroelectric projects during periods of normal runoff," Caha said.

Caha said the utility's power reservoirs are located on rivers that need the normal winter rainfall plus normal snowpack in the mountains for them to produce enough runoff for both power and reservoir filling.

"We have the snowpack. It's the rainfall that's missing, since November,"Caha said.

He said currently the cost we're paying per kilowatt-hour is reasonable. This is expected to continue due to the region's excess. In addition, Caha said after the 1976-77 drought, when power purchases totaled $9 million, the utility established a special fund to be used for purchasing extra power. Presently, that fund totals $8.6 million. He said a surcharge was necessary in 1977 to recover the amount spent on power. He doesn't think such a charge will be needed this year.

Caha said the utility's plan in dealing with the present situation first is to request voluntary conservation from Light Division customers and to defer planned expenditures. Then, to the extent it becomes necessary or practicable, to arrange for some short-term loans, borrow money from the drought fund, and seek mandatory curtailment and propose a surcharge.

Caha said, the situa;tion will be reviewed with the Public Utility Board at next Wednesday's meeting.

Washington Natural Gas Enlist Customer's Help In Finding Abducted Children

SEATTLE, WA -- Washington Natural Gas Company is joining a national campaign to help find abducted children by mailing descriptions and photographs of missing youngsters to customers along with monthly bills, company Chairman and Chief Executive Officer James A. Thorpe announced today.

The inserts also will provide the "800" hotline telephone number of the National Center for Missing and Exploited Children, which is a national clearinghouse for information on the estimated 1.5 million children reported missing each year. The Center will forward all information received on the missing children to the appropriate law enforcement agencies.

Justice Department statistics indicate that children abducted were taken. To be effective, then, a child recovery campaign must be national in scope. For this reason, the same two children will be highlighted by all participating gas distribution companies across the country each month. Photo selections will be made by the National Center, in conjunction with the Justice Department. Washington Natural Gas Company will not be involved in the photo selection process.

The bill inserts will be mailed to more than 260,000 customers in the company's total service area, which includes King, Pierce, Snohomish, Thurston and Lewis Counties.

The inserts each month will contain photographs of and identification information for two children abducted by strangers (not runaways or children taken by parents), with another two children highlighted each succeeding month.

The same information will be posted at local gas company offices throughout the Washington Natural Gas service area

" Washington Natural Gas is joining this program in sober recognition of the enormity of the child abduction problem and its grim impact on our community," Thorpe said. "We are pleased to do whatever we can to help find these children and to help prevent future tragedies."

Restaurant Customers Safeguarded Against Sulfite Additives

TACOMA, WA -- Washington state has taken an extra step to safeguard restaurant customers against sulfite additives on their food.

Besides banning the use of sulfites at restaurants, the state requires restaurants, the state requires restaurants to post a notice of any foods on which sulfites were added before the food entered the establishment.

Washington is the only state to have taken this action, according to Olga Fuste', Washington State University's Pierce County Cooperative Extension Agent.

A handy kit has been developed for people who are sulfite sensitive to use to test food. The kits can be ordered from Hach Compan;y, P.O. Box 329, Chester Town, Maryland 21620.
